

Lisbon School of Economics
& Management
Universidade de Lisboa

TASK 2b

Each group has to prepare a presentation (1 slide; 4 minutes) on the impact of economic flows of the First Globalization (1820-1914) in one country/group of countries in order to defend a predefined thesis.

Each group has to defend one predefined thesis:

THESIS	GROUP
International Trade during the First Globalization was harmful	C
International Trade during the First Globalization was beneficial	F
International Labour Flows during the First Globalization were harmful	B
International Labour Flows during the First Globalization were beneficial	D
International Capital Flows during the First Globalization were harmful	A
International Capital Flows during the First Globalization were beneficial	E

RECOMMENDATIONS

The best route for arguing is with a 'pre-post case' study, i.e. comparing one case (region, corporation, country, etc) before and after a relevant event.

Pre-post case studies are stronger when it is possible to isolate the case from other potentially important factors (i.e. the closer to 'laboratorial' conditions the better) and when it is argued with quantitative data.

Please send the slides with the group name before the class, so we can start on time.

Good Work,