The careerist: How to market yourself

Rhymer Rigby

We have long been told that we are the CEOs of our own careers. But many people still struggle with the marketing side of things. So how do you promote yourself without coming across as self-promoting?

Why do I need to promote myself?

"It's no longer enough to be good at your job," says Lesley Everett, founder of Walking Tall, a personal branding consultancy. "You need to promote yourself and take an entrepreneurial approach to your career – with your behaviour, attitude and visibility."

She argues that in many sectors and countries, reticence and self-deprecation have given way to an altogether more proactive approach to self-promotion. "People are very busy and love clarity," she says. "If you can tell them what you really bring to the table they'll thank you for it."

How do I get it right?

There are two essential ingredients. First is authenticity: your message needs to reflect the real you. "It's like a signature dish," says Jennifer Holloway, founder of executive coaching company Spark. "You need to look at the ingredients that make you different and combine them in the best possible way." Second, she says: "Blow your trumpet at a volume that suits you. You need to be comfortable with it."

Complete the rest of the article with a, an, Ø, or the.

1 ... gregarious people can often get away with being 2 ... bit over 3 ... top, but 4... others can struggle. "5... first time you try increasing 6... volume, you may feel uncomfortable, but if it suits you, you'll get used to it," she says. "One guy I work with won't even say he's 7... marketing director because he thinks 8... term 'director' is too showy. We've agreed he'll say he's 'responsible for 9...marketing' which is 10... step forward for him."

Do I give everyone 11... same message?

"Your message needs to be consistent, but it can be multilayered so you can tailor it to your audience," says Ms Everett. You should be showing 12... different facets of "Brand You" to 13... different people based on what they need.

Is it all about talking myself up?

Often, it is just about making yourself easy to remember – in 14 ... good way. It can be quite subtle – everything from your voicemail message (never say, "Sorry") to how you dress to not prefixing your suggestions with, "You'll probably hate this but . . .".

Putting yourself up as 15 ... spokesperson, learning to be 16 ... good public speaker, blogging and using 17 ... social media are all 18 ... good means of 19 ... self-promotion. Perhaps 20 ... best way, however, is to get 21 ... other people to talk you up. "Become 22 ... good networker," says Geraldine Gallacher of 23 ... Executive Coaching Consultancy. "24 ... more people you know, 25 ... more influence you have." And, she adds, "getting your clients to sing your praises for you" is 26 ... great way to reap 27 ... brownie points.

What about 28 ... cultural differences?

Broadly speaking, 29 ... Americans are much more forward about putting themselves forward than 30 ... Europeans and 31 ... Asians. But it is very contextual. "32 ... American approach in 33 ... Germany would be too much," says Ms Everett, "but in 34 ... US, it comes across as very positive."

Similarly, in 35 ...sales-based roles, 36 ... high degree of 37 ...self-promotion is often expected, but 38 ... same approach in 39 ...professional services might come across as rather strange.
